INTRODUCTION

The Department of History conducted various Peer Learning Group activities (PLGs) for its postgraduate students. Their class tutors handled the two batches of students. Both batches have around twenty students and class tutors acted as the chief mentors. The respective mentors engaged students in various activities such as presentations, discussions, individual assignments etc. Mentors also found time to meet their mentees personally. The activities also promoted comradeship among students from various backgrounds. The exercises also helped to motivate slow learners in the classes.
